

BUSINESS Feng Shui

"The difference between business Feng Shui and residential Feng Shui is that in business we are more about activities so it is the yang energy that is more important. In other words then if we draw a Flying Star chart it is the water star that is more important in the business, while in residential since we spend a lot of time in the bedroom the mountain star is the most important."

Master Joseph Yu

This course, written by Master Joseph Yu, is offered both to FSRC students and all students of Feng Shui from other schools.

Topics covered in this course include:

- Site Selection
- Building Design - A building reflects the qi of the occupants and should be designed to bring the best results.
- Office Design
- A Taiji for Every Individual - how Feng Shui differs in business is based on individual desks and offices.
- Case Studies
- Date Selection - as practitioners we're often asked for an auspicious date in launch a business venture.
- Flow of Cash
- Flow of People
- Flow of Qi
- Determining the facing direction and age of a commercial premises.

The case studies we study include those from the famous Feng Shui book 二宅實驗 Er Zhai Shi Yan, Practical Cases From Two Types of Houses (Yin and Yang meaning tombs and houses for living) written in Chinese in the early 20th Century; this interesting book has some classical Feng Shui mistakes and misinformation, yet it is seen as a book to be well relied upon. We will examine the cases and analyse these mistakes for ourselves.

We will also study case studies from Master Yu and Master Jodi.

There are some fundamental differences between commercial and residential Feng Shui. Learn the techniques that will make your readings and analysis far more accurate and correct.

This course is definitely an investment in your consulting practice.
